

HFSC Forensic Video Analyst Awarded High-Level Certification

November 13, 2015

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

A Houston Forensic Science Center Video Analyst has been awarded one of the highest-level certifications in the field of forensic video analysis. Kristopher Caesar joins just 60 other analysts worldwide recognized by the Law Enforcement and Emergency Services Video Association (LEVA) as a Certified Forensic Video Analyst, the highest designation the group offers to forensic video analysts. LEVA is recognized as one of the global leaders in forensic video and digital multimedia evidence training.

Mr. Caesar has more than six years of experience as a forensic video analyst. Originally from Toronto, Canada, Mr. Caesar joined HFSC in June 2015 as an analyst in the Center's Forensic Audio/Video Section. This unit will now be adding more analytical services, including comparative analysis.

HFSC is an independent, nonprofit, local government corporation created by the City of Houston to manage and oversee forensic services. HFSC took over management in April 2014 of what had previously been HPD's Crime Laboratory, Crime Scene Unit and parts of its Identification Division. HFSC currently operates in nine disciplines and is expanding.
